12. We do not collect automatically any data, except for information included in cookies.
13. Some areas of our Service use cookies – text files that are placed on Users' devices, identifying them in a way that is essential to use some of the Service's functionalities. Cookies usually contain name of the website they come from, time of their storage on end device and unique number. Visiting the Service without changing browser settings regarding cookies mean that they will be placed on devices of visitors. Anybody who uses the Service in any way can change browser settings regarding cookies at any point, blocking placement of these files on their devices.
14. Cookies are used in order to:
  - 1) adjust the content of our Service's website to Users' preferences,
  - 2) optimize usage of our Service's website through, among other things, recognition of User's device and personalization of the Service's website on their device,
  - 3) develop statistics that are helpful in understanding the way Users use our Service, which allows us to keep improving the structure and content of the Service's website.
15. Within the Service website we use two basic types of cookies: session and persistent cookies. Session cookies are temporary files which are stored in the memory of User's end device until they leave the Service's website or close the software (internet browser). Persistent cookies are stored on User's end device for a period of time that is specified in cookies' parameters. Users can remove cookies from their devices at any moment.
16. The cookies we use are divided into the following types:
  - 1) ones that enable usage of services that are available in the Service, e.g. to authorize cookies used for services that require authorization in the Service's website;
  - 2) ones that serve for assuring security, for instance to detect misuses within authorization in the Service's website;
  - 3) ones that enable collection of information on the way the Service's website is used;
  - 4) ones that enable saving of settings selected by User and personalization of interface in terms of e.g. language or regional settings;
  - 5) ones that enable provision of advertising content to Users that corresponds to their interests.
17. The most popular browsers that are used to browse the internet, enable saving cookies on end devices by default. However, every user can change these settings so that the browser automatically blocks saving of cookies or informs about an attempt to save cookies on a device. Information on cookies' management is available in browser settings.
18. We hereby inform that blocking or restricting of saving cookies may affect operation of some functionalities of the Service.

19. Cookies saved on Users' devices can be used by our advertisers or business partners.
